

THE ABILITY TO PIVOT QUICKLY

If you are looking for tools to help your organisation in the face of disruptive and radical change, Reinvention: Accelerating Results in the Age of Disruption [Greenleaf Book Group Press], by leadership development experts Shane Cragun and Kate Sweetman might fit the bill.

In, the authors “share their simple formula, common principles, and set of tools for individuals and organisations facing disruptive and radical change”.

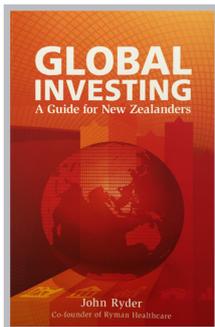

The blurb says Cragun and Sweetman are the leading global experts on the new competency of reinvention – the ability to create ‘quantum individual and organisational change accelerated’.

“The ability to pivot quickly, profoundly, and effectively might be the most important core competency for individuals and organisations to acquire who hope to prosper in the new economy,” says Cragun. “It’s no longer enough to change when you have to. Leaders must change before they have to, and they must enable their organisation to surf the incoming global shockwaves with intelligence, agility, strength and command.

“When they do, leaders and organisations can actually accelerate performance,” says Sweetman. “It’s vital that leaders understand that success in the age of disruption requires significant shifts in world views, approaches, skills and behaviours.”

GLOBAL INVESTING

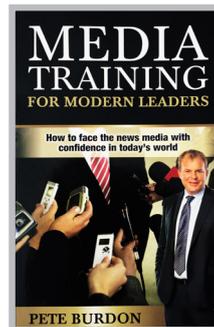

Ryman Healthcare founder, John Ryder’s book Global Investing, A Guide for New Zealanders (Bateman RRP 39.99) explains how the Global Financial Crisis occurred and how investors can negotiate (and even thrive from) meltdowns like this in the future, according to the book’s publicity.

Ryder takes a very practical approach taking lessons learned from the GFC and interspersing them with analysis on how equity markets work, when to invest, the psychological makeup of investors and how to read the business and economic cycles to harness emerging opportunities.

Ryder also outlines 23 of his most valuable trading strategies and tools he has learned in his years as a successful business owner and investor.

MEDIA TRAINING FOR MODERN LEADERS

New Zealander Pete Burdon’s book Media Training for Modern Leaders: How to face the news media with confidence in today’s world offers advice and tools to help leaders “turn news media encounters from perceived threats into major opportunities”.

The publicity says the book provides five steps to eliminate any fear of the news media, the vital secrets to answering the toughest questions and how to avoid landmines that can derail an interview.

It looks to be a practical hands-on tool offering techniques that are valuable in building confidence and getting important messages through to the right audience.
